When it comes to affiliate marketing there are several methods in which a person can make money. The truth is that there are literally thousands of great techniques and education courses available that will show you exactly what to do to achieve success.

Unfortunately most "newbie" affiliate marketers experience information overload from these programs and eventually give up before they ever make a dime. Most of the time, the new affiliate marketer will blame the eBook or training course for lack of success and quickly spends more money on new education.

What they fail to recognize is that it's usually not the eBook that is the problem; it's the person reading it that decides the outcome.

The truth is that only a small percentage of affiliate marketers actually earn the big profits that everyone is dreaming of. Although affiliate marketing is not a hard task, only a fraction of people really have what it takes to stay focused and press on even when the sales aren't coming in right away.

If you want to be successful you must conquer the "self doubt" that is going to kick in as soon as you devote some time to your new affiliate marketing venture and don't see the results. You must understand that this is natural and while others are giving up you are going to press on, build from your experiences, and continue to educate yourself on affiliate marketing strategies and tactics.

Think of affiliate marketing as pushing a snowball up and over a hill. At first it's going to be difficult because gravity (doubt) is working against you. But after you make it over the peak you can't stop the snowball even if you wanted to simply because it keeps getting bigger and continues to roll on its own.

So you need to understand that all the hard work is going to come at the beginning without any reward. But as you continue to market your affiliate programs on a daily basis, pretty soon your efforts will start paying off simply because you are everywhere on the Internet.

Forums... You're there!

Articles... You're there!

Social networking... You're there!

Search Engines... You're there!

EBay... You're there!

And on and on it goes!

In closing, if you are just getting started with affiliate marketing make sure you do your research, find the right training program, and then stick with it. If you are one of those people that have already purchased a bunch of education programs, then maybe it's time to dust them off and give them another try before you spend more money on training
